Pink Coats, Fretty Women and Handsome Horses Made Picturesque Gathering.

The weekly meet of the Deep Run hounds proved an attraction sufficiently ationg to bring out one of the largest fields of the season, and those who car line, were well repaid for any effort it may have cost them by the picturesque gathering of pink coats, pretty women and handsome horses, which greeted them and handsome horses, which greeted them at the Hill monument.

Shortly after 4° o'clock the baying of the hounds announced that the pack had been released. In a few moments some sixteen fox hounds dashed by the waiting huntsmen, and in their eagerness to follow the seductive scent had wasted not a moment for the sportsmen to follow in their wake, in an instant the riders were mounted, and with a last wave to the gathered spectators, galloped after the fleeing pack. Down the Hermitage Rosd they went until, upon reaching Sherwood Park, they swerved to the left, took the hurdle which burred their way, and passing through the park, were soon upon Brook turnpike. Along the turnpike the pace was one to try the mettle of the best of horses, but all proved themselves equal to the task, and well merited the check which occurred at Brook store.

proved themselves equal to the task, and well merited the check which occurred at Brook store.

From the latter place the hurt passed through Elden Park, the Ginter estate, Grant's. Schwartz's and on into Warwick's. The hounds were well packed and giving mouth freely when the first hurdle in Warwick rose from under the brow of a forbidding booking bill, but note futtered at the deceptive drop jump, and no mishap was experienced. A gallop of a few hundred yards and the field was before an ugly, approach to a fence of stiff limber. But here again all went well, and the riders sped rapidly over two more hurdles, which brought them into Brook Road near Lakeside.

From this point a long check gave a second rest to the now weary horses, and the hunt proceeded leisurely along the road to the cur line in the rear of Lakeside. Here the hounds again threw off and at a ripping pace led the hunters over the three hurdles along the car line, and on by the quarry into Bloomingdale.

line, and on by the quarry into Bloomingdale.

From Bloomingdale to Mordecai's occupled but a few minutes, and when the field, after passing through the latter estate, turned into the club grounds to face the imposing array of five consecutive jumps, one would not have imagined that these were the same tired huntamen and horses, who, under a summer sun, had galloped eight miles through mid and mire. The true instinct of a sportsman had come to the assistance of heartless rider, and foam covered stud and courageously they leared the only obstacles which remained between them and a well earned rest.

Danville: Tobacco Market.

(Special to The Times-Dispatch.)

DANVILLE, VA., March 19.—Pollowing is Messrs. Dibrell Bros's weekly review of the Danville tobacco market:

This has been another week of very parge sales, although not so large as the week previous.

A good deal of tobacco received by rail in hogsheads has been accumulating in the warehouses the past week or two. This has been put on the market this week whenever the wagon receipts were not toe, heavy.

Like last week, the quality has been rather below an average of the crop; but on several occasions this week, there was as large a proportion of fine wrappers in one or, two of the warehouses as we have seen at any time this year. In fact, the finest wrappers we have seen in this crop were sold here this week.

It is quite remarkable that under such heavy receipts as we have had for the
